▶ Revel

Revel may rethink smoking ban

NEW JERSEY. The management team at Atlantic City's embattled Revel hotel and casino has privately told investors that the resort is reconsidering its smoking ban in the face of ongoing money troubles, according to a report from The Wall Street Journal.

The casino may allow customers to light up on parts of the floor, among them a new gaming area still being planned.

Revel, which has focused on generating more revenue from its restaurants and rooms than from gaming itself, has suffered a series of financial blows since its opening two years ago and is now seeking to reorient itself among its many competitors in the gambling town. METRO/AW

Veterans help Red Cross

WEST PHILADELPHIA. After personnel with the Philadelphia Veterans Comfort House served over 100 hours assisting the American Red Cross with Hurricane Sandy relief efforts, the organization yesterday announced the formation of veteran and volunteer action "away teams" that will aid first responders in other regions facing emergency situations. "This is part of our effort to keep serving our country and community in and out of uniform," manager David Kamioner said in a statement. "Given our success with the Red Cross during Hurricane Sandy Ops, we hope our supporters will now join us in similar missions to aid their neighbors in times of crisis." METRO/AW

Local review site puts customers on notice

- Nastyclient.com lets local businesses review their clients
- 'Maybe the customer's really the jerk,' says website's founder

In a world seemingly dominated by crowdsourced reviews on sites like Angie's List, one local man has created a forum where business owners can turn the tables on armchair critics.

Nastyclient.com, the brainchild of Feasterville's Matt Stachel, bills itself as "the anti-Yelp." The site allows business owners to file reports against customers who have stiffed them, stolen from them or otherwise cheated them.

"The straw that broke the camel's back wasn't one particular story of mine," Stachel said yesterday. "It was more the frustration of always seeing the other side of the story being told. You always see on the news 'another deadbeat contractor takes a deposit from a homeowner and doesn't do any work.' But you never get the business's side of the story and you never get to hear, 'Hey, that customer that's ripping on the business, maybe the customer's really the jerk.'"

▶ Stachel's site has more than 2,000 members.

Quoted

"I want the consumer to say, 'You know what? I better pay my plumber because I don't want to end up on Nasty Client.'"

STACHEL

Stachel founded the site nearly two years ago after spending more than two decades working in landscaping. It has since grown to include more than 2,000 members who have posted over 4,000 "nasty clients." An estimated 50 to 60 percent of them are located in the tristate area.

Alex Wigglesworth
awigglesworth@metro.us

The Yelp factor

While many businesses fear negative Yelp reviews, the popular site points out that most reviews by customers are positive. "I think it's important to note that 80 percent of reviews on Yelp are three stars or higher, so, statistically speaking, Yelpers are more inclined to write about their positive experiences," Yelp Public Relations Manager Kristen Whisenand said in an e-mail.

Bad business

Here are some excerpts of reports filed on some of Nasty Client's nastiest clients:

A landscaping client in Lahaska, Pa., is accused of nonpayment of services: "He got me to drop my guard by being extremely nice and polite in the beginning, only to change once additional work was done without a contract. This very crafted scheme was taken out on several other contractors that worked on the property."

A lawn maintenance client in Sussex, N.J., is accused of ceasing to pay his bills: "He was always a late payer but ended up at one point or another paying. He always had talk about big install jobs because he just purchased the house so I didn't want to lose the customer. Then he decided he would just stop paying but then got mad when I did not plow his driveway. Stay away."

Advocates fire back at plan to 'reset' schools

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Fight for Philly's Anne Gemmell addressed media on the steps of the School District headquarters yesterday.

PHILADELPHIA. Members of the Philadelphia Coalition for Advancing Public Schools yesterday responded to Superintendent William Hite's recently released plan to "reset" Philadelphia's ailing School District that hinges on improving academic performance and stabilizing finances in a cost-neutral way.

"What we don't see in this plan is a change from the austerity of the School District budget," president of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers Jerry Jordan said. "In order for these things to be accomplished, we are going to have to make sure we have adequate resources so that children will be able to be offered a high quality education and the plan does not address it — it is cost-neutral."

The group is also calling for a one-year moratorium on school closings. METRO/AW

Man charged with kicking cop in the head

LEBANON COUNTY. A man has been charged with aggravated assault for allegedly kicking a state trooper in the head after being arrested for ramming two cars, according to a report from The Patriot-News.

Christopher Witkowski, 28, reportedly slammed his car into two vehicles in Lebanon County around 2:30 a.m. Saturday morning. Police said Witkowski fled the scene, then crashed his car again a short time later. Believing Witkowski was under the influence, accident responders took him to Good Samaritan Hospital for chemical testing, according to the report. # An 'LA Rebellion' on Philly screens

New series at International House examines work of 1960s African-American filmmakers

With screenings of three diverse and fascinating films on Saturday, International House kicked off its monthlong series called "L.A. Rebellion: Creating a New Black Cinema."

With nine more programs planned over the next several Saturdays (and one Wednesday), "L.A. Rebellion" is one of the largest series undertaken by I-House's programmers. The films were all recently restored by the UCLA Film & Television Archive as part of the multi-institution "Pacific Standard Time" exhibition.

"There was a desire on my part and the organization's part to do something a little larger," says curator Jesse Pires. "Presenting a whole month's worth of programming can really get people excited. It generates a sustained interest in film culture and in looking at something that was new and exciting at the time."

▶ Zeinabu Irene Davis' "Compensation" screens Saturday.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE

Coming up

The next installment of the series takes place this Saturday with three programs: Billy Woodberry's "Bless Their Little Hearts," Zeinabu Irene Davis' "Compensation" and Clark's "Passing Through," each with accompanying short films.

What is LA Rebellion?

- L.A. Rebellion refers to a loosely affiliated group of African-American filmmakers who entered UCLA's film program in the late 1960s and created an independent cinematic alternative to the prevailing Hollywood depiction of black culture at the time.
- "It's a diverse group of filmmakers and films," Pires says of the series, which includes filmmakers like Julie Dash, Charles Burnett and Larry Clark. "I think that the general spirit of the L.A. Rebellion was to counteract the dominant themes of Hollywood cinema. They looked at other movements in cinema like Italian neo-realism as well as bringing in this general spirit of '60s radicalism."

Let your New Year's Resolution be a Long-term Weight Loss Solution

The reality of morbid obesity is that it puts people who are 100 or more pounds overweight at a greater risk of developing very serious medical conditions. Bariatric surgery offers hope and help to those who have tried repeatedly to lose excess weight and keep it off.

Weight loss is only one benefit of bariatric surgery – It can also help improve or resolve pre-existing medial conditions associated with obesity, such as Type 2 diabetes, hypertension (high blood pressure), high cholesterol, polycystic ovary syndrome, obstructive sleep apnea, joint pain and gastroesophageal reflux disease.*

"It's been 2 years since my surgery, and even I am amazed by my transformation!" –Wendy

My weight loss journey began in July 2010, when I decided to do something about my weight and my health! I was 290 lbs., and suffering from sleep apnea, shortness of breath, terrible acid reflux, and mobility issues that made it very difficult to walk the shortest distance.

I am now down 120 lbs., and wearing a size 12! My sugar levels are normal, I am no longer plagued by acid reflux, my sleep apnea has been resolved, and I can walk and run without missing a beat! In fact, I recently completed a 13-mile 1/2-marathon!

Megabus, BoltBus overcome stigma

A U.S. bus-transportation boom is accelerating as travelers ditch their cars and avoid airport security lines to buy cheap tickets on motor coaches with Wi-Fi. Bus transportation was again the fastest-growing form of U.S. intercity travel last year, with scheduled departures up 7.5 percent, the most in four years, according to a DePaul University study released yesterday.

Between 1980 and 2006, the industry declined an average of 2.9 percent a year. Since then, it's grown between 5.1 percent and 9.8 percent a year.

Discount companies like Megabus and BoltBus have benefited from a U.S. safety crackdown on Chinatown competitors, increasing their departures 31 percent last year. BLOOMBERG

BoA, Fannie Mae reach $11.6B settlement

▶ The agreement covers 44 percent of Bank of America's total pending claims for the third quarter.

Bank of America Corp. on Monday entered an $11.6 billion settlement to end Fannie Mae's claims that the bank improperly sold it mortgages that later soured, and to resolve problems with foreclosures, the companies said.

The agreement largely covers the $11.2 billion of claims that government-owned finance company Fannie Mae had against the bank, which represented about 44 percent of the bank's total pending claims at the end of the third quarter.

Bank of America, which bought Countrywide in 2008, still needs court approval for an $8.5 billion settlement with private investors and is locked in litigation with insurer MBIA Inc. over mortgage-related claims.

The settlements, other charges and a series of asset sales the bank also announced Monday will result in Bank of America posting only a small profit for 2012's fourth quarter. REUTERS

Why settle?

▶ The settlement is a major step for Bank of America toward resolving claims from investors who want the bank to buy back loans that its Countrywide Financial subsidiary sold to them during the housing boom, many of which later went bad.

Mortgage lenders pay up

A group of 10 mortgage servicers agreed on Monday to pay a total of $8.5 billion to end a U.S. government-mandated case-by-case review of housing crisis foreclosures in an acknowledgement the program had proven too cumbersome and expensive.

3.8M

Roughly 3.8 million borrowers who were foreclosed on within the time frame of the review will receive cash compensation ranging from hundreds of dollars up to $125,000, depending on the type of errors they experienced, the U.S. Office of the Comptroller of the Currency said.

▶ The reviews followed the "robo-signing" scandal that emerged in 2010 involving allegations banks pursued faulty foreclosures by using defective or fraudulent documents.

3.3B

Bank of America Corp., Citigroup Inc., JPMorgan Case & Co., Wells Fargo & Co., MetLife Bank and five others will pay $3.3 billion directly to eligible borrowers and $5.2 billion in loan modifications and forgiveness, regulators said. REUTERS

Obama formally nominates Hagel, Brennan

President Barack Obama on Monday nominated former Republican Senator Chuck Hagel as his next defense secretary and counterterrorism adviser John Brennan to head the CIA, potentially setting up a Senate confirmation battle on two fronts and establishing a tough tone to start his second term. # 'Justified': Change is coming

Season 4 brings new faces — and new trouble Timothy Olyphant, star and executive producer of the FX drama, on the challenges facing his US marshal

A new partner in (fighting) crime

Comedian Patton Oswalt joins the cast as Constable Bob Sweeney, an old classmate of Raylan's. "I wouldn't call it a friendship; I'd call it a working relationship," Olyphant says of the pairing.

On set, however, the alliance was much more chummy. "Patton Oswalt is money — I mean, that guy's so good," Olyphant says. "He makes it a little tough for me to get through a scene with a straight face and yet he's so serious and fantastic."

Raylan moonlights as a bounty hunter

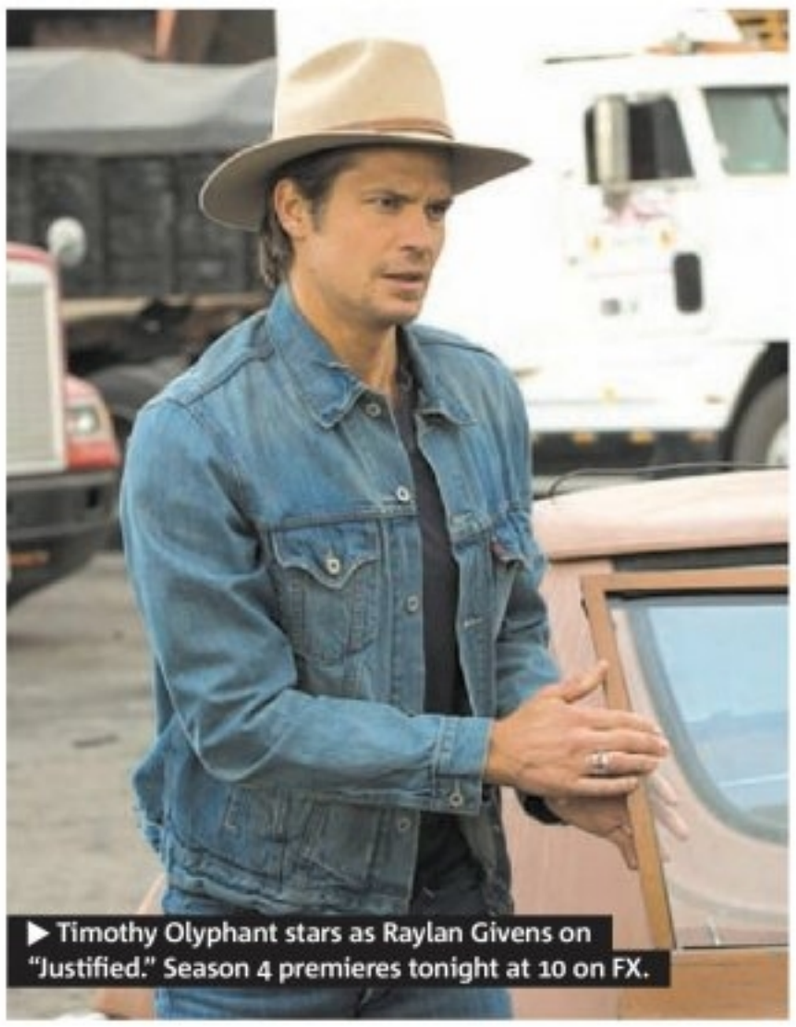
The marshal who grew up with crooks has always tiptoed the line between being a "good" and "bad" guy. That line gets blurred when he illegally takes a side gig to earn extra money for the baby he's about to have with his estranged ex-wife. "He seems to be walking right up to the edge now and then, and that's kind of the fun of it — watching how close he can get to that without crossing," Olyphant says of the lawman who bends the rules. "Others try to pin him down on who he is. ... Raylan refuses to allow that."



▶ Timothy Olyphant stars as Raylan Givens on "Justified." Season 4 premieres tonight at 10 on FX.

And some things never change

As long as burgeoning crime boss Boyd Crowder (Walton Goggins) is around, Raylan is going to have his hands full in his hometown.

"You're not going to get through the season without them hooking up," Olyphant says of the show's central antagonistic pair. "What we didn't want to do is just keep it on the same scene over and over. We're doing our best to try to keep the story both familiar but yet unexpected. Stay tuned."

Raylan as a dad

Don't expect to see this guy spending a lot of quality time with his child, for one reason: "Little kids on the set — they tend to be a pain," Olyphant, a father of three, says. "And if they're not, their parents are. So, I don't see us having a kid on the show too much."

Lorr gets bent out of shape in new memoir

Benjamin Lorr takes on Bikram (the man and the practice) in his rollicking new book, 'Hell-Bent: Obsession, Pain, and the Search for Something Like Transcendence in Competitive Yoga'

Benjamin Lorr's memoir on Bikram Yoga, "Hell-Bent: Obsession, Pain, and the Search for Something Like Transcendence in Competitive Yoga" is a fascinating romp through the yoga world's most bizarre (it's very, very hot) and profitable subculture. We asked him a few questions about the book and if, after everything, he still practices (he does!).

Can you give us a little background on how you started Bikram Yoga?

I walked into my first studio overweight and injured — with little or no preconceptions about Bikram or yoga — and quickly fell into a daily practice that verged on the pharmacologically addictive. ... I would go on to lose 45 pounds over the first three months, reinvent myself into someone who regularly used 'juice' as a verb, and find myself surrounded by a community of otherwise normal-to-too-thin-looking people who were basically doing the same thing. It was weird and fantastic and so I decided I wanted to write a book to try and understand it all.

What do you say to people who think that Bikram is a hippie cult?

Does anyone still think of yoga as hippie anymore? It feels so overwhelmingly mainstream these days. Bikram Yoga in particular is just about 100 percent against everything I associate with hippies. Aside

HELL-BENT
OBSESSION, PAIN, AND THE SEARCH FOR SOMETHING LIKE TRANSCENDENCE IN COMPETITIVE YOGA
"This extraordinarily thoughtful book stretches and reaches and bends in several seemingly impossible directions at the same time. . . . A wonderful, inspiring, maddening, complicated, edifying journey."
—Elizabeth Gilbert, author of Eat, Pray, Love
BENJAMIN LORR

Bikram 101

How do you describe Bikram?

Bikram Yoga is a series of 26 asanas performed at 105 degree heat and has wonderful therapeutic benefits. Bikram the man is a petty controlling hatha yoga master who designed the series. He lives in Beverly Hills surrounded by expensive cars, true believers and his own ever-increasing loneliness — which is, of course, why the book is such an interesting read.

"I would go on to lose 45 pounds and reinvent myself into someone who regularly used 'juice' as a verb."

LORR, ON HIS BIKRAM TRANSFORMATION

from attracting exceedingly type A individuals, it features using fossil fuels to add heat and a guru obsessed with money and gangsters, decked out in enough bling to give Kanye pause. As for the cult part, well, you'll have to read the book and come to your own conclusions. Suffice to say, even though I don't think so, I can't be so dismissive of the label.

What was the craziest thing you discovered in your research and writing?

I'm not sure if this is "crazy" exactly, but watching just how well the guru, Bikram Choudhury, appeared to fit the profile of Narcissistic Personality Disorder raised my eyebrows the most. And this in a world where my eyebrows were constantly being elevated — be it from the people running out of the room to vomit, sobbing into their palms after a shattering class or telling the most amazing stories of how they used the yoga to transform their lives and heal. The guru's personality — on throne, surrounded by acolytes, babbling away at lecture, and yet, achingly brittle, often sad, always needy — never failed to surprise me. He would say things about how he could withstand any amount of physical pain, but "put me in a room by myself and I will kill myself." Fascinating.

Why your teen can't put down the junk food

It's because teen brains are conditioned to like it, says former FDA commissioner His new book aims to break the cycle

Former FDA Commissioner David Kessler's 2009 best-seller, "The End of Overeating," introduced the idea that our eating habits are reinforced by the fat, sugar and salt pervasive in our diets. Now, he's speaking to the adults of tomorrow with "Your Food is Fooling You" to teach teens the science behind their behavior and how they can change it.

Why write a book for young people?

The goal was to try to speak to them in a voice that doesn't talk down to them, that really tries to explain how they can protect themselves — to make sure that their neural circuits don't get adapted to wanting and responding to these cues. The goal was to give young people the tools so that their grown brains, these neural circuits, do not get adapted to this constant wanting and constant responding. Because once the neural circuits get laid down, it's very hard to unlearn that behavior.

So what can we do about it?

Dr. Kessler says that food cues are hard — but not impossible — to unlearn.

WAVEBREAK MEDIA

[Have teens ask:] 'Is it real food, or is it just highly processed layers of fat, sugar and salt?' Being able to take charge is powerful.

Will changes be made at the federal level?

The food industry will change when people change what they buy and what they want.

Future of fat

Why is childhood obesity a bigger problem now?

We had this problem under control when I was growing up. What's changed in the last four or five decades? Three things: One is we've taken down the boundaries of when we eat. We made it socially acceptable to eat anytime. Second, there are more places where food is available all the time. You can't walk more than 100 feet and not be stimulated with food. And three, we made our food so highly processed and so layered and loaded with fat, sugar and salt — which makes it highly stimulating and is why the cues are so powerful.

Golf in Myrtle Beach, with a Mystical touch

▶ Good luck finding a more unique clubhouse than The Wizard's castle in Myrtle Beach.

Getting there

The Witch, Man-O-War and The Wizard are in the heart of Myrtle Beach and within 15 minutes of Myrtle Beach International Airport, beaches, accommodations, restaurants and other attractions. A short distance from I-95 and other major thoroughfares, Mystical Golf courses are easily accessible. More than two dozen cities — including Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, New York and Washington — offer direct flights.

Easy access and scores of good courses mean Myrtle Beach remains a haven for golfers looking to escape the Northeast winter

Packages abound, particularly for the Mystical trio: The Witch, Man-O-War and The Wizard

After a recent visit, Mystical Golf's trifecta of Myrtle Beach courses — The Witch, Man-O-War and The Wizard — now holds the pole position on my golf vacation radar. Why? The three Dan Maples' designs are flat-out superb, the maintenance is country club-good and the price is reasonable — especially the stay-and-play packages.

Though Man-O-War and The Wizard are adjacent and The Witch is 10 minutes away, each course is a golf universe unto itself.

The Witch is Myrtle Beach golf at its finest with many tricks up her devious sleeve as 500 acres of tranquil cypress groves and wetlands provide plenty of hazards due to Mother Nature. Strategy is rewarded as the par-71, 6,702-yard layout is an SAT test of the ancient game.

Muscular Man-O-War is soothed by a 100-acre lake on its edge. This is a study in water management as H2O touches every hole. The par-72, 6,967-yard Man-O-War intrigues with its spectacular (and rare) back-to-back island greens on 13 and 14.

The Wizard is as Scottish as haggis with bumps, hollows, mounds, swales and sod-faced bunkers. The welcoming old-world, castle clubhouse is the most unique 19th hole you'll find.

Myrtle Beach is also second to none when it comes to post-round fun, with dining locales for every palate and pocketbook. Don't miss Greg Norman's Australian Grille, a popular fine-dining spot at Barefoot Landing. Meanwhile, the Murrells Inlet Marsh Walk — a half-mile stretch of seven fun dining and entertainment establishments — is another "must."

Horoscope

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. It's important to be astute regarding touchy situations, because if you're not, you could easily allow yourself to be dominated by another. Don't let it happen.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When you are unable to achieve your objectives, don't look for scapegoats to blame. The fault will easily be traced back to you should you bite off more than you can chew.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. It's important to prevent emotion from dominating your thinking. If you don't, what you let yourself believe about a financial matter might not be in line with reality.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Do not let a reckless companion inspire you to act in a similar manner. If you should, together you might do something quite foolish and costly that you'll later regret.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Some big problems could arise if you foist onto co-workers certain jobs that you should be taking care of yourself. Strive to be industrious instead of manipulative.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Normally, you're a pretty good judge of people, yet your instincts could unexpectedly fail you. Unfortunately, you could place your trust in someone who has no intention of living up to it.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. IObjectives you establish for yourself are likely to be achieved. However, the targets you're striving to meet will turn out be of little consequence to you or anybody else.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You might not be as mentally sharp as you think. It's one of those days when you should avoid trying to match wits with anyone who has lots of knowledge and expertise.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Guard against inclinations to count your chickens before they hatch. Be a little optimistic, but, first and foremost, let your common sense prevail.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Try not to let your indifference put you in a position where you have no input in important decisions being made about your life. Others' thinking could easily work against you.

Let's adopt China's global approach

RE: "MEASURE TWICE, CUT — WELL, A LOT" (METRO, JAN. 7) The U.S. officially will spend $700 billion this year on military. If all areas of associated expenditures could be counted (space, nuclear, electronic, off-budget wars, etc.), $1 trillion could be more accurate. The U.S. easily accounts for half of the world's military expenditures while it has only 3 percent of the world's population? Such expenditures could not be accomplished without depriving its own population of standard advanced country benefits. The next highest spending country is China. It should be noted that China adequately defends its interests in the world while spending just about $100 billion.

LEWIS WALSH, VIA E-MAIL

"The young of this country should be panicked at the inability of the federal government to reduce spending while — with this administration's failed economic policies — about 15 percent of the population is on food stamps."

RON FALCON, VIA E-MAIL

Obama: The way to world peace

What is the best way to achieve world peace? With President Obama's inaugural ceremony right around the corner, scholars will propose what the president should do, indirectly answering the question above. As a Muslim-American, I want to first congratulate the president on his reelection and pray that he will lead the nation effectively during his second term. I think that the President has — domestically — done a good job. Among many things, he has had a congenial attitude towards Islam. Even though he has been called a Muslim, he has never portrayed Islam negatively. However, I wish the president applied the same level of fairness abroad. For example, the Guantanamo Bay Prison is still in operation. So, the question: What is the best way to achieve world peace? Absolute justice.

ANGELO CATALDI

THE VOICE OF THE PHILLY SPORTS FAN

BIRDS BRASS LACKING EXPERIENCE

In the chaotic week following the ouster of Andy Reid, one major problem has emerged for the Eagles. It has a name: Jeff Lurie.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages. Opposing viewpoints are welcome. Send 100-word submissions to letters@metro.us.

First, the owner gushed his way through an embarrassing news conference that seemed more like an induction ceremony for Reid than a firing, and then the real trouble began. Flanked by his clueless GM Howie Roseman, Lurie embarked on a coaching search that is confirming our worst fears.

If fans were put off by Lurie's gee-whiz style, can you imagine the reaction of a coaching candidate after hours and hours of his mindless prattle? Lurie's top two choices, Bill O'Brien of Penn State and Chip Kelly of Oregon, decided to stay in college after marathon sessions with the owner. What a surprise.

Kelly's decision was especially revealing, since he had Lurie and his former best pal, Joe Banner, in a bidding war for his totally unproven NFL services. After a combined 16 hours of talks with Lurie, Roseman and Banner — representing his new team, Cleveland — Kelly walked away from at least $25 million.

Although the Eagles will never admit it, the loss of Kelly was a major blow. Just go back to Lurie's original description of his ideal coach: "I'm looking for someone that's innovative. Somebody that is not afraid to take risks." No one filled those mandates better than Kelly.

Even worse, the misfire proved that the Eagles lack someone with football gravitas, someone who can speak the special language of the game — and someone who would make a five-year contract seem like a great opportunity, not a prison sentence.

The first time Lurie conducted a coaching search was 1995, when his top choice was Dick Vermeil, a Philly icon pondering a return after a 12-year hiatus. Vermeil rejected the offer because he was worried about the lack of football experience in the front office. Eighteen years later, nothing's changed.

So the big question is, who will look past Lurie's shortcomings? Mike McCoy seems like the most promising choice, if for no other reason than what he could do to develop Nick Foles into a top QB. Bruce Arians is the most interesting name, because of his Temple connection and his exceptional work in Indianapolis.

Sadly, it is becoming clear that the Eagles will need more than a new coach. They will need a miracle worker who can overcome not just the 31 other NFL teams, but also the court jester looking down from his ivory tower, Jeff Lurie.

– Angelo Cataldi is host of 94 WIP's Morning Show, airs weekdays 5:30-10 a.m.

Eagles chatter

Reid provides one final insult to Eagles fans

In the end, Andy Reid didn't even bother to say goodbye. After 14 years of pretending he cared about Philadelphia, the former coach called off his parting news conference last week and launched his four-day campaign for another job. It was one final middle finger to a city that supported his team with their money and their hearts.

When he resurfaced in Kansas City, lucrative new contract in hand, he had the audacity to praise the Eagles and their fans during his introductory news conference yesterday — 1,128 miles away. He called Philadelphia "tremendous" and then held a conference call with the local media. Sorry, Andy. Far too little, far too late.

People who believe Reid gave everything required of a head coach during his 14-year run here have very low standards. Given the choice between honesty and blind allegiance to his players, Reid always chose the latter. That really wasn't the problem. No, the problem was that he never made any effort to inform the same fan base that he praised so lavishly.

Need an example of a coach who does both? How about a man who worked for Reid, John Harbaugh? He answers questions without lapsing into mantras like "gotta do a better job" and "take full responsibility." Harbaugh respects the people paying his salary. Reid never did.

Reid's final snub was especially revealing because it represented his one true opportunity to communicate honestly with the fans. Even a dolt like Rich Kotite attended his goodbye news conference, and Ray Rhodes took calls on his radio show the day he was fired. Unlike Reid, Rhodes knew he would never get another head coaching job, and still he showed up.

NHL chatter

Bettman needs to leave hockey

The NHL will return after the most ridiculous lockout in history. Faced with a crisis entirely of his own making, Commissioner Gary Bettman finally released the hostages Sunday morning.

If you're waiting for some expression of joy, sorry. I am thrilled for the incredibly loyal hockey fans of our city – less than 200 cancelled season tickets — but my celebration will begin only when Bettman leaves the sport.

The most amazing part of this four-month shutdown is how few people thought it was a good idea. Players made major concessions, a majority of owners were ready to sign on the dotted line before the leaves turned color and fans were starved for their favorite pastime. There was no philosophical dispute. It was all about money.

Bettman got owners to agree that all he needed to impose his will was eight votes. The small-market clubs formed a bloc behind Bettman and did whatever he told them to do.

The best news is that the deal is for 10 years. Bettman will be 70 — too old for the worst despot in sports to shut down the NHL for a fourth time? We can hope.

More idle thoughts from Angelo Cataldi ...

1 Staff infection. The make-up of Andy Reid's new staff will be fascinating. Will he choose his most recent offensive coordinator, Marty Mornhinweg, or his first, Brad Childress? Will he bring his back his former bobo, GM Tom Heckert? Two you can cross off: Jim Washburn, Howard Mudd.

2 Duck you. Chip Kelly was the most exciting choice to replace Reid, but the Oregon coach wasn't worth the risk. With no NFL experience, a funky offense and prickly personality, he was more likely to be a disaster than the next Bill Walsh. It sure would have been fun.

▶ Kelly

GETTY IMAGES

3 Just say no. If Juan Castillo takes the job Reid is offering to coach the Chiefs' offensive line, he's dumber than we thought. Reid turned Castillo into a laughingstock, and now he wants a do-over? Castillo should tell Reid where to go — and it's not Kansas City.

4 Numbers don't lie. Before Jeff Lurie schedules the Hall of Fame induction ceremony, here are a couple of stats to consider. Reid was 26-51 vs. playoff teams in his 14 years here, and 34-54 vs. teams above .500. Read those numbers again. They aren't misprints.

5 What legacy? Former players had a lot to say after Reid's firing. Jeremiah Trotter said the Eagles were outcoached against better teams. Hollis Thomas said Reid should have left two years ago. And Donovan McNabb urged us to recall Reid fondly. Guess which one is looking for a job.

Bended knee

RG3 seeking second opinion on right knee

Redskins quarterback Robert Griffin III will visit Dr. James Andrews for a second opinion on his injured right knee. The team didn't reveal the results of RG3's MRI, but a Washington Post report cited partial tears to the anterior cruciate ligament and lateral collateral ligament in the knee.

Congrats!

Messi FIFA Player of Year

Barcelona soccer star Lionel Messi was named the FIFA Player of the Year after scoring a world-record 91 goals.

Messi, 25, won the award for the fourth straight time. Abby Wambach took home the hardware on the women's side, edging teammate Alex Morgan. Wambach guided the U.S. to a gold medal at the London Games.

Eagles reboot search after Kelly rejection

Fire up the coaching search. Again.

Chip Kelly will not be the one to succeed Andy Reid after the coach decided to return for his fifth season at the University of Oregon. Kelly, who was the Eagles' top candidate, has turned down NFL offers in each of the past two offseasons.

One week after losing their season finale to the Giants, the Eagles are still without a coach. The team has interviewed Falcons defensive coordinator Mike Nolan, Falcons special teams coordinator Keith Armstrong, who satisfied the NFL's Rooney Rule requirement, and Broncos offensive coordinator Mike McCoy.

The Eagles have also asked permission to speak with Seahawks defensive coordinator Gus Bradley, Colts offensive coordinator Bruce Arians and Bengals offensive coordinator Jay Gruden.

The team had shown interest in Doug Marrone, but the Syracuse coach inked a deal to be Buffalo's coach. METRO

▶ Bradley's defense was impressive last weekend in shutting down Robert Griffin III and the Redskins.

Why not us?

If we were the Eagles' front office, we'd get these guys on the phone immediately.

Vic Fangio, 49ers defensive coordinator
If anyone has watched the 49ers play defense over the past two seasons, you know why this name is here. Fangio's unit plays a smart, aggressive style and was ranked No. 1 in the NFC in total defense this past season. Fangio's defense also limited opponents to a 33-percent conversion rate on third down.

Mike Zimmer, Bengals defensive coordinator
The Eagles are pursuing the wrong Cincinnati coordinator. Zimmer has been among the best and brightest over the past five seasons. In 2012, his unit registered 51 sacks — third-best in the entire NFL — and Cincy ranks Top 10 in every pertinent defensive statistic. Plus, his fiery attitude would be a perfect fit for Philly.

51 Zimmer's unit registered 51 sacks in 2012.

Ray Horton, Cardinals defensive coordinator
The Cardinals stumbled down the stretch, so Arizona's rankings slipped. But don't be fooled. Horton, a Dick LeBeau disciple who runs a 3-4, has proven he deserves a shot over 28 years in the NFL as a player and coach. Mike Vick is still trying to figure out where that goal-line blitz came from when the Birds were clobbered out in the desert.

Temple frosh rewarded as All-America

So what do Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel and Temple's Tyler Matakevich have in common?

Both have been named to Freshman All-America first team, a distinction held by only one former Owl.

The 20-year-old finished the season with 101 tackles and 67 solo stops, earning him Big East Rookie of the Year. He became the only Temple first-team selection besides Dan Klecko (1999).

"This is truly an amazing feeling," said Matakevich, from his Stamford, Conn., home. "It is such an honor to be recognized among the great names of the Temple football tradition. I can't wait to get back to school and get back on the football field."

Matakevich is one of 15 true freshmen selected to the 30-player team, coached by Urban Meyer of unbeaten Ohio State. JON MARKS

Hail to the Chief: Reid takes up the reins in Kansas City

Former Eagles boss introduced as Chiefs head coach Reflects on his time in Philadelphia, credits fans and organization Sees change as very positive thing

As the Eagles' coaching search drags on, the team's former leader has moved on. Dressed in a red Chiefs tie and shiny Chiefs lapel pin, Andy Reid was introduced yesterday as head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Reid spoke glowingly of both his new employer and his old one. He had no regrets on his 14-year tenure in Philadelphia, reiterating several times that change can be a very positive thing.

"Sometimes change is good," said Reid. "It could be tremendous for the Philadelphia Eagles, and at the same time, I think it's going to be tremendous for the Kansas City Chiefs."

After addressing the Kansas City media, Reid did a conference call with Philadelphia reporters. His message was the same — no regrets — and he stressed his fondness for the city that gave him his big break, back in 1999.

"I still love Philadelphia. I haven't sold my home there. I wish nothing but the best for the team and people there," Reid said.

GETTY IMAGES

Reid will have the No. 1 pick in the 2013 NFL Draft. Yesterday, he addressed his plans for the future while reflecting on his 14-year tenure in Philadelphia.

Quoted

"I think [Philadelphia is] in a better place now then when I took over."
REID

"The fans cared. I didn't care if they were chanting my name in a bad or good way. They cared. They told us if we stunk, they told us if we were good." REID

Reid had come under some scrutiny in recent days for cancelling a farewell news conference at the NovaCare Complex. The coach explained he meant no disrespect, instead he needed to get his emotions in check.

"It's an emotional thing, I needed to take a step back," Reid said. "This is the right time. Fourteen years, man, the fan base there is great, they're all in, they care about football."

He went on to compliment the entire Eagles organization, from owner Jeffrey Lurie to GM Howie Roseman. Reid, without getting into specifics, admitted to a few mistakes along the way and hinted that he should have stuck with Juan Castillo.

"When all is said and done, we were a better defense with Juan than we were without Juan," he said. All in all, Reid is content with his legacy.

"Did we get the championship? No. But I'm not going to forget those other wins. There was nothing more that I wanted to do than win a Super Bowl for Philadelphia."

Mike Greger
mgreger@metro.us

Did Reid have final say on personnel over Roseman?

Andy Reid, ever the company man, took the high road again.

When asked who had final say on personnel matters over the past three offseasons, he cited a "joint effort." It had been speculated that GM Howie Roseman was in charge of those drafts and drastic coaching changes. However, owner Jeffrey Lurie absolved Roseman of it, except for 2012. Roseman later confirmed that Reid had final say.

"When it's working right, it's a joint effort. It's not one guy sitting in there with a hammer," Reid said. "When that gets out of whack it goes downhill real fast. If that's skewed at all, it goes downhill real fast." METRO

Notices

Legal Notices

Notice:

Pursuant to the Land Recycling and Environmental Remediation Standards Act, the Act of May 19, 1995, P.L. #4, No. 2 (Act 2), notice is hereby given that Eastern Tower Community Center-Philadelphia Chinatown Development Corporation has submitted a Notice of Intent to Remediate and is submitting a Site Characterization Report/Remedial Investigation Report/Cleanup Plan to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (PADEP), Southeastern Regional Office, for the parking lot located at 10th and Vine Streets, City of Philadelphia, Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania (Site). Historic uses of the Site include trunk manufacturing, tailoring, sheet metal works, lithography, masonry resurfacing, printing, and foam cushion manufacturing. Polyaromatic Hydrocarbons and Volatile Organic compounds were detected in soil and groundwater samples collected from the Site, respectively. The remediator intends to participate in the Pennsylvania's Land Recycling and Environmental Remediation Standards Act (Act 2) Program and demonstrate attainment of PADEP Site-Specific Standards by elimination of exposure pathways through engineering controls, and collection of quarterly groundwater attainment date. Act 2 also provides that when a site is being remediated to a Site-Specific Standard, the municipality is afforded a 30-day comment period. Until February 8, 2013, the City of Philadelphia may request to be involved in the development of the remediation and reuse plans for the site, and to develop and implement a public involvement plan. Copies of these requests and any other comments should also be submitted to the PADEP, Southeast Regional Office, Land Recycling/Cleanup Division, 2 East Main Street, Norristown, Pennsylvania 19401.
